

IU welcomes Wingdings Cultural Center

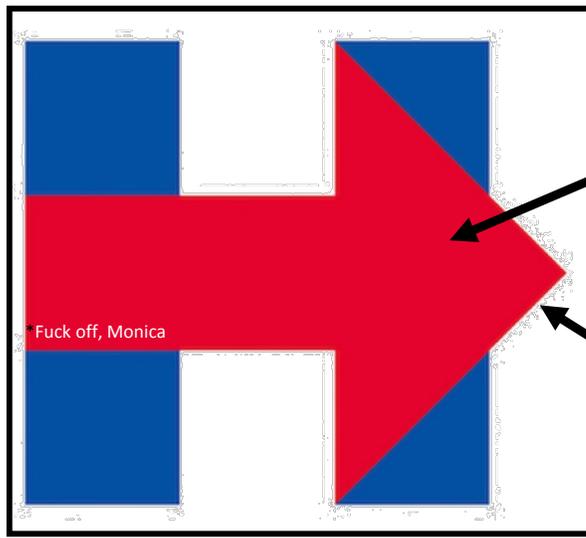

Pink Freud | Staff Writer

This year, IU's international community marks a milestone with the opening of the Wingdings Cultural Center. Since gaining recognition in 1990 on the Microsoft Windows 3.1 OS, people of Wingding descent have become highly valued members of IU's foreign language program and the international community.

"The journey has been long and arduous," said Dr. 𐀀𐀁𐀂𐀃𐀄, professor of Wingdings language and culture. Turn Down for What?

With Little 500 week upon us, many people have been pondering DJ Snake's philosophical question: for what shall we turn down?

1 8 a.m. Monday walk of shame to the courthouse

General respect for campus, humanity 2

3 Waking up hungover in a cubicle at Wells with condoms and panties in your mouth

4 The scientifically proven harm that copious amounts of alcohol causes to your frontal lobe

5 Academic probation

When the combust-ed couch is the one you're sitting on 6

Next Week's Poll:

What will you do with this poll?

In past issues, Flipside has associated different missions with different polls. This time, we will leave it up to you. What will you do with this issue?

- bedding for my hamster
- placemat at IMU Burger King
- Reading material for the sake of entertainment
- Emergency toilet paper
- Backup bra stuffing
- Butt plug

Thanks are in order for two Flipsiders who put a considerable amount of behind-the-scenes work into each issue

Flipside would like to thank graphic designer Emmy Nem, for dealing with us and all of our bullshit. We writers have been late on pretty much every deadline and we aren't quite sure why she still works with us. But she does, and for that we love her.

Flipside also thanks Constance T. Nopel, for being Flipside's entire business department. Although she had already sold most of her soul to the Kelley School of Business, Flipside was more than happy to purchase the rest of it.
